Carbon Nation is an optimistic, solutions-based, non-partisan documentary that illustrates why it's incredibly smart to be a part of the new, low-carbon economy: it's good business, it emboldens national and energy security, and it improves health and the environment. Through a cast of engaging and endearing characters from across the country, in towns big and small, Carbon Nation introduces us to the new wave of American ingenuity.

Peter Byck has over 20 years experience as a director and editor. His first documentary Garbage won the South by Southwest Film Festival, screened in scores of festivals and played at the Museum of Modern Art and at the Lincoln Center. In addition, he has edited documentaries for Peter Jackson's Lord of the Ring and King Kong. Peter has edited documentaries and promotional shorts for Warner Bros., Universal Pictures, 20th Century Fox, MTV, Vh1, BBC, Disney and MGM, including The West Wing, The Matrix, Scrubs and many more.
