The Applicable Chilean laws and regulations are national in scope:

- Civil Registry law, Decree No. 4808 of February 10, 1930
- Criminal Procedural Code of September 29, 2000

(1) Maximum Period before Burial: Chilean Law No. 4808, Article 46, stipulates that interment cannot take place earlier than 24 hours after death. Article 48 in General Regulations for Cemeteries by Chile's Sanitary Code stipulates that no corpse may remained unburied for more than 48 hours after death except under the following exceptions:

1. When ordered by the judicial authority or National Public Health Service for investigation purposes;
2. When a corpse has not been claimed and is used for scientific research in accordance with the Sanitary Code, Article 145;
3. When the corpse has been embalmed and previous authorization was granted by the National Public Health Service;
4. When the corpse was donated in life for scientific research.

(2) Embalming: Embalming is performed by licensed physicians in Chile, though it is not a general practice in this country. In the case of remains that will be transported internationally, the corpse is treated with an injection of formalin to delay the decomposition of the remains for 90 days. This is generally done within 2 or 3 days after death.

(3) Cremation: Cremation is permitted by national law. There are adequate cremation facilities in Santiago and other cities in Chile. A cremation consent act must be executed in life before a notary public. In absence of this document, the following family member (in the order shown) must request cremation: 1) the surviving spouse; the majority of the adult children; surviving parent(s). In absence of a next of kin, the person responsible for the interment may request the cremation. In the case of the death of a foreign person without a next of kin in Chile, the diplomatic or consular officer may request the cremation on behalf of the next of kin in the country of origin/residence.

(4) Caskets and Containers: Caskets must have a metallic lining and be hermetically sealed. In addition to this requirement, the casket must be encased in a strong wooden container when the remains will be shipped out of the country. All such caskets and containers are available in Chile.

(5) Exportation of Remains: The following Chilean documents accompany the casket encased in a strong wooden container when shipped out of the country:

1) Chilean Official Death Certificate issued by the Civil Registry Office;

2) Burial Permit issued by the Civil Registry Office;

3) A written statement executed by the licensed physician that performed the embalming in which it is stated that the deceased did not die of a contagious disease and that the remains can be shipped to the United States without a health risk.

4) National Public Health Service Permit attesting to compliance of the casket and outer case as required for shipment of the remains; and attesting to the fact that the National Public Health Service Inspector sealed the casket containing the corpse; and ordering that seal shall not be tampered with or destroyed prior to arrival of the casket at the final destination; and authorizing the shipment of the remains out of the country.

5) Statement executed by the funeral home representative attesting to the fact that the casket and contains only the remains of the deceased and necessary clothing and packing material.

The following Chilean documents must accompany the Ashes when shipped out of the country:

1) Official Chilean Death Certificate issued by the Civil Registry Office;

2) Certificate issued by the Crematorium stating that the remains of the deceased were cremated and placed in a sealed urn.

Disinterment is not generally possible before 8 years when interment is in above-ground columbarium niche, or 5 years when buried underground. If the remains are to be removed from the cemetery to be transported within the country or out of the country, a permit must be obtained through the National Public Health Service.
