DISCLAIMER: The information below relating to French legal requirements is provided for general information only and may not be totally accurate in a particular case. Questions involving interpretations of specific provisions or application to a specific case should be addressed to the French government officials (French consulate nearest your residence in the U.S., or the nearest préfecture if you are currently in France). The Embassy is not in a position to intercede with French authorities on behalf of Americans seeking visas, visa exemptions and work permits, or answer questions concerning a specific case. French visa inquiries will not be answered by the U.S. Mission by email or phone. Please read information on the Schengen Agreement prior to planning your trip to France.

Travel to France

Very Important: Since it is not mandatory for Schengen border control officials to stamp incoming passports, upon your arrival in France you must make sure that the immigration officer at the port of arrival stamps your passport with the date of entry.

Persons who have not obtained the required visa for extended stay (more than 90 days) in the European Union may be detained and/or refused authorization to continue traveling, at any time, by immigration officials in any of the Schengen Member Treaty Countries.

Tourism: Shorts stay (less than 90 days)

A valid passport is required for all U.S. citizens and foreign national entering France. (Your U.S. passport must be valid for at least three months beyond the applicant’s last day of stay in the Schengen states.) Visitors must have ready for presentation at the border documentary evidence of the purpose of the visit, means of support for the duration of the stay and accommodation arrangements.

Note: American passport holders are not required to obtain a visa prior to visiting France for up to 90 days in any 180-day period.

As of October 18th, 2013, the rules for calculating short stays within the Schengen area have changed.

More details and a calculator online on the European Commission’s website page.

General Information on visas for France is available on the French Embassy’s website page and on http://www.diplomatie.gouv.fr/en/coming-to-france/getting-a-visa/article/general-information-for-foreign
Long stay (over 90 days) and Residing in France:

Americans planning to stay in France for more than 3 months, or for purposes other than tourism, must obtain a long stay visa prior to departure from the United States. U.S. citizens must apply at the French Consulate having jurisdiction where they reside in the United States. Where a long-stay visa is issued, you must, on arriving in France, register with the French Immigration and Integration Office (OFII) or, in some cases, apply to the relevant préfecture for a residence permit.

Once the visa holder has entered the French territory, no visa modification or change of status may be obtained. In addition, exercising a salaried occupation is subject to specific procedures that require getting a work permit prior to applying for a visa.

Visas in order to marry in France with a French citizen

The specific visa in order to marry in France with a French citizen no longer exists. If you plan to marry in France with a French citizen but do not intend to settle in France after the marriage, you should apply for a short stay visa for private visit in France (marriage). This visa, if granted, will not allow you to settle in France nor will be transformed there.

Please check the "Short stay visa section" for further information.

If you plan to marry in France with a French citizen and plan to settle there as well, you should apply for a "Long stay visitor" visa. When the marriage has been celebrated, your visa will be transformed afterwards into "a Spouse of French citizen" resident card at the French local government (prefecture).

Please check the "Long stay visa section" for more information.

General Information on visas for France is available on the French Embassy’s website page.

French Administrative Forms and Schengen Area Information

More information for many of the documents that you may need to request from the French administration may be available online at:

- http://vosdroits.service-public.fr/particuliers/N20306.xhtml

Details on Schengen Visas may be found at (http://ec.europa.eu/dgs/home-affairs/what-we-do/policies/borders-and-visas/border-crossing/index_en.htm).
Working in France:

Note: It is not possible for an American citizen to come to France as a tourist and then change his/her status to that of a worker, a student or a resident. The French authorities will require such individuals to return to the U.S. to apply for the appropriate visa.

In order to work in France, American citizens must hold a valid French work permit which is obtained at the préfecture in France only after a visa is issued from the French Consulate in the applicant’s country of residence. This visa is valid for France only.

Very Important Note: Persons who have not obtained the required visa for extended stay (more than 90 days) in the European Union may be detained and/or refused authorization to continue traveling, at any time, by immigration officials in any of the Schengen Member Treaty Countries.

Employment in France

Americans hoping to enter the French labor market are cautioned that it is very difficult to find employment. To be able to work in France, Americans, except for those in special categories, must have obtained a work visa before entering France, and must have arranged employment approved in advance by the French Ministry of Labor. Note: the U.S. Embassy cannot intervene with French Authorities on behalf of American citizens seeking a visa, visa exemption or work permit.

Americans who disregard the visa requirement and apply in France for a work permit are required to leave the country to obtain the appropriate visa at a French consular office in the U.S. American citizens should not come to France expecting to find a job and to change their status after arrival. Such expectations are unlikely to be fulfilled and personal hardship may result. Most foreigners are not eligible for French Social Security or unemployment benefits. In some cases, individuals may have difficulties with French authorities and may face expulsion from France.

Employment Situation in France:

There has been a virtual freeze on the employment of nationals of all countries other than nationals of member countries of the European Union. Unemployment in France for the third quarter of 2013 reached about 10.9% (http://www.insee.fr/fr/themes/info-rapide.asp?id=14). French laws and regulations governing immigration and employment in France are enforced with increasing rigor.
A few categories of Americans in France are in a special position with regard to employment. These are:

a. Bearers of a carte de résident who have resided in France in that category for ten years;

Most Americans, however, do not fall into any of these special categories. The only other Americans who have any chance for full-time employment in France are highly skilled technicians and qualified managerial (cadre) personnel. Some students can qualify for part-time au-pair employment, and other students can qualify for part-time or summer employment. There are also some voluntary collective work programs. Visas for any of these jobs must be obtained before entering France. The Embassy cannot assist Americans to find employment in France, but this information sheet as well as the related ones herein offers some guidance.

Persons seeking Employment:

In addition to the basic requirements, an American who wishes to work in France needs a work contract approved by the French Ministry of Labor. This means that the French employer is required to present the signed contract to the Ministry with a request for its approval.

A medical examination is required (within the last three months and usually by a doctor on a list prepared by the French Consulate); the visa applicant is expected to pay the doctor’s fee.

Teaching Positions:

The teaching field in France is largely closed to Americans. Teachers in French public secondary schools and public universities must be French citizens. At the secondary level, the only exceptions are teaching assistants. Public universities can hire foreigners as visiting professors (Professeurs Associés) or as Maîtres de Conférences Associés, Assistants and Lecteurs. The Franco-American Commission for Educational Exchange in Paris (Fulbright Commission) can provide information on openings for visiting lecturers in France and has a general information sheet on "Teaching Positions in France" with useful addresses in both France and the United States. American Students

Very Important: Since it is not mandatory for Schengen border control officials to stamp incoming passports, upon your arrival in France you must make sure that the immigration officer at the port of arrival stamps your passport with the date of entry.

If you intend to study in France for less than 90 days, no visa requested for American citizens.

American citizens intending to study in France for a period longer than 90 days must apply for a visa prior to leaving the United States. The visa cannot be issued once the applicant is in France. French visas are NOT issued in France.

Please refer to the website of the French Embassy and the prefecture de police in Paris for more information:
http://www.consulfrance-washington.org/spip.php?article385 and
Students studying for 12 months or less in France:
The student long stay visa, if granted, is a multiple entries visa and is valid from 4 to 12 months, depending on the length of your studies. With such a visa, you will not have to apply for a resident card (« carte de séjour »), as your visa will be valid as resident card during your whole stay.

Before going to France, you must obtain all visa information directly from the French Consulate nearest your residence since each case is specific and relates to French law. If your visa is approved, you will obtain an OFII registration form (OFII or l’Office Français de l’Immigration et de l’Intégration). You will complete the top section and the consulate will stamp it and return it to you, if your visa is granted. Bring this stamped and partially completed form with you to France. You will then fill in the last portion upon your arrival in France and send it to the closest local branch of the OFII. You must send in your form within three months of your arrival date in France, and you will be contacted for an appointment. After three months, if you have not obtained the OFII authorization, you are no longer legally in status in France.

Details on the procedure for completing this document and process to follow prior to your departure to France, as well as steps to take once you have arrived in France are on this document OFII registration form. Please visit the website of the OFII for forms and procedures.

A fee of 58 euros is required for your registration.

Upon reception of your file, the OFII will send you a receipt and will provide you with an appointment for a medical examination. This is mandatory.
