

Emergency Financial Assistance

U.S. citizens sometimes face financial emergencies while overseas due to robbery or other unforeseen circumstances. In most cases, family, friends or employer can wire money directly to a U.S. citizen overseas through Western Union, MoneyGram, or other similar commercial money transfer services with offices overseas.

In emergency situation, where no commercial alternative are available, the Consulate can help receive and disburse funds sent from family, friend to U.S. citizens using the Department of State Overseas Citizen Services OCS Trust process. For further information about this service, please refer to the Department of State's <http://travel.state.gov/content/passports/english/abroad/legal-matters/benefits/sending-money.html>
