

The American Center
invites you to a program on

A Multi-Genre Approach to Writing

This workshop will introduce English language teachers to a creative approach to writing in which students are allowed to explore topics of their choice through various genres. This is a wonderful way for secondary level and college students to find their voice, and express their ideas, while also learning to write in various styles. Examples of multi-genre papers will be provided for teachers to use as a model. Participants will also be shown how to access the tools they need to feel confident with this approach.

by

Mary Kay Seales

Senior English Language Fellow
U.S. Department of State

at 9:30 - 11:30 a.m.

December 10, 2011

at

The American Center
24, Kasturba Gandhi Marg, New Delhi

Intended audience: ESL/EFL teachers of secondary/senior secondary school as well as college teachers

RSVP:

Shweta Khanna

Tel.: (011) 2347-2401

E-mail: KhannaS@state.gov

Note: Please carry a photo identity card to enter the American Center.

The American Center
invites you to a program on

Content-based Instruction for Teaching English

In this workshop the presenter will present 'content-based instruction,' one of the current "best practices" in Communicative Language Teaching, and show English language teachers how this approach can increase learner autonomy and motivation. This approach can be especially interesting for large classes and secondary schools/colleges because students can work in groups on various aspects of the content module, according to their personal strengths. The presenter will show how she has successfully used content modules to teach a variety of classes at different levels from American Culture courses to higher level Academic Writing courses. Participants will also have a chance to explore their own ideas for content modules that will support their own classroom and syllabi.

by

Mary Kay Seales

Senior English Language Fellow
U.S. Department of State

at 12:00 - 2:00 p.m.

December 10, 2011

at

The American Center
24, Kasturba Gandhi Marg, New Delhi

Intended audience: ESL/EFL teachers of secondary/senior secondary school as well as college teachers

RSVP:

Shweta Khanna

Tel.: (011) 2347-2401

E-mail: KhannaS@state.gov

Note: There is no fee for attending the workshops.