

PROF. CLYDE WILCOX

Professor Wilcox is a professor in the Government Department at Georgetown, where he has taught for 20 years. He writes on a number of topics in American and Comparative politics, including religion and politics, gender politics, public opinion and electoral behavior, campaign finance, and science fiction and politics. He has authored, coauthored, edited, or co-edited more than 30 books. Professor Wilcox meets with many international visitor groups and has lectured in a number of countries. In the past three years he has lectured in Kenya, France, Russia, Turkey, China, Jordan, Spain, Japan, Canada, England, and Poland.