

The U.S. Consulate General in Jerusalem Announces The 2014 espnW Global Sports Mentoring Program

The U.S. Consulate General in Jerusalem and the U.S. Department of State's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs (ECA) is pleased to announce the espnW Global Sports Mentoring Program for 2014. In its third year, up to 20 international female candidates will be matched with leading female executives from America's most prestigious sports organizations for a month-long mentorship from September 7, 2014 to October 9, 2014. The program will provide international participants, also known as emerging leaders, with unique opportunities across all aspects of sports to develop relevant management and business skills, gain exposure to the U.S. sports business, media, and non-profit environments, and establish lasting relationships and a global network of leaders in the sports sector. This program is the flagship component of the State Department's Empowering Women and Girls through Sports Initiative.

The 2014 program includes several days of orientation in Washington, D.C., a three-week mentorship in the U.S., and a series of closing days and activities in Washington, D.C. The D.C. orientation will introduce the emerging leaders to USG officials, high-level figures in the sports sector, and representatives of sports business associations. Emerging leaders will also learn about the history and culture of the United States, the American sports structure, and the history of women's sports in the United States. Following the orientation, the emerging leaders will travel individually to their mentorship locations. Each participant will work with a senior female executive and her team and engage in activities designed by the organization and the program partners to meet the needs and interests of the participant. While at the mentorship, the emerging leader will work with her mentor and their networks to craft an action plan with the aim to increase the number of women and girls who participate in sports in her home country. During the final Washington, D.C. component, the emerging leaders will share and evaluate their mentorship experiences and finalize the concrete follow-up action plans that they will have developed in cooperation with their mentors. In order for the mentorship to play into global, long-term positive change, this strategy for implementation upon the participant's return home is considered a key element of the program. The nominee's ability to create this strong follow-on project for her home country and its potential to increase the number of women and girls participating in sports weigh heavily in the selection process.
