Small Group Work: Power in Numbers – Working Together to Inspire Change

Together with panel experts and guest speakers, audience members will work in sub-groups by panel topic to develop ways for women's groups in Papua New Guinea to coordinate on key issues. Reflecting on the history of the women's movement in Papua New Guinea since 1975, audience members will develop responses to the following questions:

- How should women's groups organize to achieve policy and social change in Papua New Guinea to improve the status of women and their livelihood?
- How can women's groups work together to access and make better use of government and donor resources? How can we coordinate better for results?
- Has the PNG government's gender policy been successful in advancing women and gender equality? What changes might need to be made?
- How can we steer the government to fulfill its international commitments such as the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action?

Co-Moderators:

- Julie Bukikun, Senior National Program Specialist, UN Women
- Dr. Rangita de Silva de Alwis, Director, Global Women's Leadership Initiative and the Women in Public Service Project at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars

Her field of specialization includes performance monitoring, project design and indicators development, and integrating gender considerations in development. Ima was responsible for the project design, and implementation of USAID's newest project in the Pacific Islands on women, peace and security in the Autonomous Region of Bougainville. Ima has received a number of meritorious honor awards, including runner-up in the U.S. Department of State's Swanee Hunt Award "for her tireless and creative work to successfully engage women in improving USAID/Philippines' peace and development efforts in the conflict-affected areas of Muslim Mindanao", and nominee to the Laura Bush Award for Excellence in the Advancement of Global Women's Equality. She completed her graduate work in Women and Development at the University of the Philippines.

Lily Be'Soer

Founder, Voice for Chang Jiwaka

Lilly is from Tombil Village, Minj, Jiwaka Province in the highlands of Papua New Guinea. She was a victim of tribal conflict that lasted for 17 years and is now resettled in another place. She is also a survivor of polygamous marriage and currently raising five children alone. A women's rights defender and advocate working for the political, economic and social empowerment of women, Lilly is the team leader for Voice for Change (VFC), a provincial NGO based and working in the new Jiwaka Province to promote safe communities and to End Violence Against Women/girls. VFC is currently a recipient of the UnTrust Fund, a three-year project (2013-2015) which is partnering with the new government of Jiwaka Province, the Local Level Government and the communities to End Violence Against Women. In 2012, Lilly successfully coordinated a peace reconciliation to resettle about 500 internally displaced families (IDPs) and also helped set up a committee to address the terror, violence and sometimes fatal impacts related to sorcery.

Monica Paulus

Founding Member, Highlands Women's Human Rights Defenders Network

Monica works on rapid response with the Police to respond to sorcery cases. She also works in partnership with the YWCA on counseling and violence against women. In the past, Monica worked with Meri Kirap Sapotim, a local CBO, as a volunteer to help women and children who are accused of sorcery. She also helped to repatriate and settle them in safe avenue and assist in courts and village mediation. She further documented cases of abuse with UN, Oxfam, and Amnesty International. Monica holds a graduate certificate in Tropical Agriculture from Popondetta College.

Angela Apa

Provincial Coordinator, Kup Women for Peace

Angela Apa is the coordinator of Kup Women for Peace based in Kerowagi District in the Simbu Province. In 1999, after one of the worst clashes her tribe had faced, she and two other women from enemy tribes came together to take action to stop the violence. The three made secret plans to bring peace to their communities in an environment in which, according to tribal laws, women of enemy tribes were not allowed to talk to one another. Risking their lives, the three women came up with clandestine and innovative ways to meet and strategize, such as discussing their peace plans while shopping at the local market. Angela and her colleagues succeeded in mobilizing others to support peace in the district, and even walked out onto the battlefields to send out messages of peace. This led to the creation, in 2002, of Kup Women for Peace (KWP), which works on promoting peace between communities and ending violence against women.

Josephine Kauona

Chairperson, Tunaniya Open Learning Center

Josephine is a defender of human rights who survived the Bougainville conflict and the blockade as the wife of BRA Commander Sam Kauna. She has been an advocate of peace and reconciliation and is the chairperson of Tunaniya Open Learning Center, whose main objective is to coordinate life skills trainings with special interest in illiteracy in partnerships with development partners. She is also a strong advocate of women rights and GBV and worked on reintegrating in the local societies, women accused of witchcraft.

Theresa Jaintong

Treasurer, National Council of Women

Theresa Jaintong has held several high-profile positions, including Minister for Health Provincial Interim Government; Member of CEDAW Shadow Report for the United Nations Council, New York; Chairperson and Board of Directors, Women's Training Centre; Member of Weapons Disposal Committee; and Arawa Town Council Chairperson. As head of Bougainville Women's Council, she has been prominent in coordinating the women's role in Peace and restoration. Her key achievements include peace-building on Bougainville, the rehabilitation of health centers in Bougainville after crisis, and working for the cease fire during the Bougainville conflict.

Agnes Titus

Bougainville Program Coordinator, UN Women

Agnes Titus has long represented the women of Bougainville well by speaking out about the issues that affected them. When the "Bougainville Crisis" exploded, Agnes played a very big part in leading the women in building peace across Bougainville, especially when women and children were the vulnerable victims. She helped establish the Leitana Nehan Women's Development Agency which contributed to bringing out combatants and integrating them back into normal village life. The programs also contributed to women taking part in decision making at all levels, but especially at the village where they live. In her role as a UN Women employee, she promoted gender equality in political governance in the form of workshops and radio presentations. Agnes supported the ABG to come up with the Bougainville Action Plan on Women Peace and Security and she has supported the Gender Equality, Women Empowerment, Peace and Security policy to give direction to the creation of the gender unit and focal points.

Dennise Mathieu

U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for East Asia and Pacific Affairs

Ambassador Dennise Mathieu is a career member of the Senior Foreign Service, and assumed her position as deputy assistant secretary for Australia, New Zealand and Pacific Island Affairs on August 19, 2013. Prior to her current assignment, she served as the foreign policy advisor (POLAD) to the United States Transportation Command.

Previously, she served as the U.S. Ambassador to the Republic of Namibia from November 2007 – September 2010, and as the U.S. Ambassador to Niger from November 2002 – September 2005. Governor Parkop was first elected to the National Parliament in the July 2007 National General Election for the NCD Regional Seat. In June, 2010 he founded the Social Democratic Party, of which he is the current leader. He was re-elected for the same seat in the 2012 elections.

In November 2009 he launched the International Parliamentarians for West Papua – Papua New Guinea Chapter showing his support for the self-determination of the people of West Papua. Before entering Parliament he was a private lawyer who spoke out on issues concerning Human Rights and was Director for the Individual and Community Rights Advocacy Forum Inc. (ICRAF) from 1995 - 1998. His occupations prior to that included lecturing law courses at the University of Papua New Guinea and reporting for the National Parliament and local papers.

He holds a Masters of Laws Degree from the University of Warwick (UK), a Bachelors of Laws Degree from the University of Papua New Guinea and a Diploma in Journalism from the University of Papua New Guinea.

Honorable Charles Abel

Minister for National Planning

Charles Abel was elected to the 8th National Parliament in 2007 as an Independent Member for the Alotau Open seat. Shortly after being elected he joined the National Alliance Party and was appointed Minister for Culture and Tourism. In July 2010 he joined three other Ministers in defecting to the Opposition in an unsuccessful attempt to oust Prime Minister Sir Michael Somare in a vote of no confidence. In August 2011 he was appointed Minister for Trade, Commerce and Industry following a change of government and the election of Peter O'Neill as Prime Minister. He contested and won back his seat in Parliament in the 2012 National General Elections and was subsequently appointed Minister for National Planning. Prior to entering politics he was a businessman. He holds a Bachelor of Economics from the University of Queensland. He is married to Hacy Henao Abel and they have three children.

Coalition for Change PNG Inc. (CFC)

CFC is a community based not-for-profit advocacy group launched in November 2008 to address the issue of gender based violence, particularly violence in the home. It seeks to change the attitudes of individuals so that women and children are treated with respect and dignity. After it was formed, CFC priority was to seek legislative policy reform to curb domestic violence. On September 18, 2013 CFC's advocacy efforts were proved successful when Parliament passed the Family Protection Bill the organization drafted. The bill makes domestic violence a criminal offense and provides victims the legal avenue to seek protection.

Papua New Guinea's silver jubilee celebrations. Concerns about the alarming rate of family and sexual violence against women and children caused several organizations and individuals to approach the British High Commission (BHC) and AusAID through the Institute of National Affairs (INA) to sponsor a workshop to address these issues. The result was the setting up of a national body (FSVAC), specifically mandated to look into the problems associated with family and sexual violence and to come up with concrete ways of addressing these problems.
