

MEDICAL INFORMATION

There has been extensive planning by the Shanghai Health Bureau to cover all possible medical emergencies that may develop over the six months that the EXPO is open. Health care sometimes poses a challenge for foreigners visiting Shanghai in part due to the language barrier but also a difference in patient management, treatment protocols and customer service. Good health care is available in Shanghai – if you know where to go. This information sheet provides contact information on Chinese and western medical facilities available in Shanghai.

In the EXPO Grounds

There are five first aid clinics able to treat minor medical problems and arrange transport to hospital for more serious cases. These clinics are staffed by physicians from different Chinese hospitals depending on the Zone in which the patient seeks care. All are affiliated to the best Chinese hospitals. There are two situated on the Puxi side which has the corporate pavilions and three on the Pudong side. They can be found on the EXPO map marked as a green cross. There is an ambulance on standby at each site. The physicians staffing these clinics DO NOT speak English.
