

Yale-NUS College Dean of Students Office and Rector's Office Present

Lessons From The African American Experience

The Honorable Kirk Wagar

United States Ambassador to the Republic of Singapore

To mark African American History month in February, U.S. Ambassador Kirk Wagar will speak about the enormous impact of African Americans on U.S. history, culture and society. A firm belief in social justice fueled the U.S. civil rights movement and remade America but recent events show much progress needs to be made. Around the world and in Asia, ethnic divisions and cultural differences cause strife and violence. The Ambassador will discuss how lessons learned from African American history can help guide these difficult conversations and show societies a path forward.
