

U.S. Embassy—Mexico City NAFTA Factsheet

Total goods trade between the US and its NAFTA partners grew 279% from 1993 to 2012.

Important Facts:

- In 2012, NAFTA trilateral trade reached $2.3 trillion. Trade between the United States and Mexico represented almost 70% of the total trade. Between 1993 and 2012, total U.S. trade with Mexico increased by 506%. In comparison, U.S. trade with Canada increased by 191% during the same period, while trade with non-NAFTA countries increased by 225%.
- In 1994, Mexican exports to the United States were almost 85% of its total exports; in 2012, it fell to a record low of 77%. U.S. exports to Mexico have risen from about 10% of total exports to 14% during the same time.
- U.S. top export categories to Mexico in 2012 were: Machinery ($36.0 billion), Electrical Machinery ($34.0 billion), Mineral Fuel and Oil ($23.8 billion), Vehicles ($20.4 billion), and Plastic ($13.9 billion).
- U.S. exports of agricultural products to Mexico totaled $18.9 billion in 2012, the 3rd largest U.S. Ag. export market. Leading categories include: coarse grains ($3 billion), red meats, fresh/chilled/frozen ($1.9 billion), and soybeans ($1.9 billion), dairy products ($1.2 billion), and wheat ($1.1 billion).

Total goods trade between the United States and its NAFTA partners grew from $293.1 billion in 1993 to more than $1.2 trillion in 2012, an increase of 279%. Total services trade between the U.S. and NAFTA partners grew from $44 billion in 1993 to $82 billion in 2011 (latest data available for services trade), an increase of 86%.

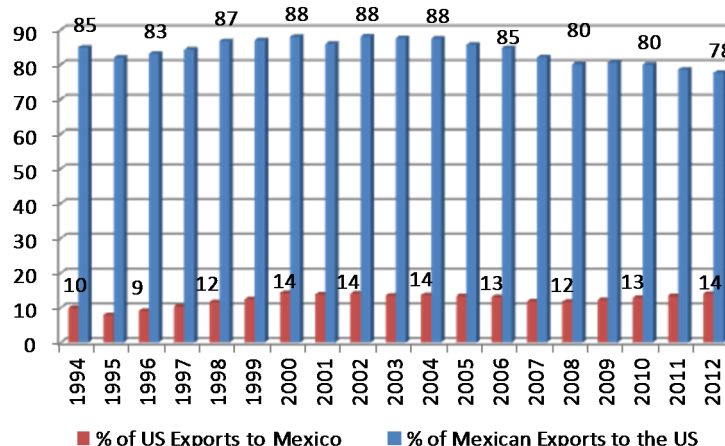

The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) between the United States, Canada, and Mexico entered into force on January 1, 1994, and created the world's largest free trade area. NAFTA links more than 461 million people producing $17 trillion worth of goods and services annually (2011). The dismantling of trade barriers and the opening of markets has led to economic growth and rising prosperity in all three countries.

NAFTA has increased Mexico's overall trade as well as brought about a wave of foreign direct investment; it has increased the competitiveness of Mexican industry; boosted unionization in Mexico (90% of the workers in Mexico's export manufacturing industry are unionized); helped improve Mexico's regional development, particularly along the Northern border; and helped U.S. economic growth (Mexico tends to buy more U.S. exports as its GDP grows).

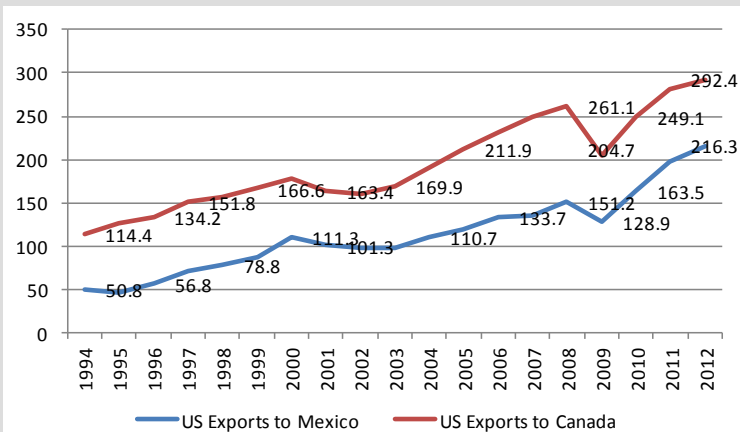

Mexico is the second largest destination for U.S. exports and third largest source of imports (this is without considering the European Union). The United States and Mexico have transformed the nature of the bilateral relationship from one of competition to one of partnership. For the U.S. and Mexico cross-border trade often occurs in the context of production sharing. People in each nation work together to create goods and regional supply chains crisscross the U.S.-Mexico border.
